Now that baseball has been put away in moth balls for the winter, the managers will get together and hope out some changes and new legislation. There are enough important matters to consider to keep them busy during the winter months.

Incidentally, there are a number of immigrants who have just about finished counting the cost of the season just past, and have found that it has come very high. Col. Ebbert is considerably out of pocket, for while his Brooklyn club collected $90,000 in salaries it has been anything but a drawing card this year.

"Old Doc" Crandall.
 Old Crandall, long the champion pinch hitter of the big leagues, will celebrate his twenty-ninth birthday today. "Doc" started the 1916 season with the St. Louis Americans, as a result of the Feds, but he couldn't pass muster with Feller, Jones and was shipped off to the Oakland club of the Pacific Coast league. Crandall was born in Indiana, and started his professional career with the Cedar Rapids, Iowa, over ten years ago. McGraw got him in 1902, and with the Cubs he became famous by giving first and to following hitters. Old Doc spent practically all his time "winning up" and was always ready to go in when McGraw sent out the S.O.B. Old Doc did very well with the St. Louis Feds in 1915, winning twenty-one out of thirty-six games.

Jack Root, Top Notch Middleweight.
 It was on Oct. 17, 1909, that Jack Root knocked out Dick O'Brien in the third round of a bout at Chicago. Root, a Bohemian, was a top-notch among the middleweights in those days, and afterwards fought Marvin Hart for the heavyweight title. O'Brien, who lived in Lewiston, Maine, was also a mighty good man, and might have reached championship caliber, if he had trained properly. Root entered the ring that night with a bay window, as usual, while Root was fit and fine. Jack's superior condition enabled him to take the lead from the start, but the fight had not progressed far when he was hit and the Maine lad awaited his chance and when it came he shot over a right that sent the Bohemian down in a heap. He struggled gamely to get up, but it seemed hopeless. Finally he succeeded, with only a fraction of a second to spare. O'Brien, known as "Butcher Boy," went in to finish Jack, but the latter was wise, and managed, in spite of his groggy condition, to get through the round. In the next chapter Root was fully recovered and out for revenge and he put over a punch that sent O'Brien down so hard that he didn't even try to get up.

Al McCoy is one of the numerous bulls who used to carry the slogan "middleweight champion of the world," on their professional cards. Tomorrow Al will celebrate his twenty-third birthday. He is a native of New Jersey, and has been battling in the ring since 1910. His claim to the middleweight championship was based on his defeat of George Chip, who alleged that he became the title holder by shipping Frank Adams, who defeated Billy Pappe, who claimed the title after Stanley Ketcher's death. And there you are—clear as a bell.

Today in Pugilistic Annals.
 1887—Mike McCool, former heavyweight champion of America, died in New Orleans. McCool was a giant in stature, hard hitting and durable, but with little science or cleverness. His first battle for the title was with Joe Cornish at Charleston, Mo., in 1893, when he was defeated in thirty-five rounds. In 1895 he defeated Bill Davis, of California, in thirty-four rounds at Rhodes Falls, Mo. He was challenged in 1899 by Tom Allen, an Englishman, who had defeated a number of good men on both sides of the Atlantic. They fought on an island in the Mississippi, near St. Louis and Allen was clearly entitled to the victory, but he was robbed of it. McCool was a St. Louis man, and he had a big following in that metropolis. When his backers saw that he was whipped in the ninth round they cut the ropes and warned into the ring, broodingly, knives, clubs and pistols, and forced the referee to award the decision to McCool. In 1912, at St. Louis, McCool was defeated in twenty minutes and Mike retired.

1902—Joe Gans knocked out Kid McFarland in the fifth round at Fort Erie. A big bunch of Buffalo boxing bugs turned out for this fight, for the little negro was then at the beginning of his championship career, having won the lightweight title with a punch at Fort Erie a few months before, when Frank Fitz lost his laurels in about the shortest time on record. Kid McFarland was one of the best lightweight of the day and had seldom been decisively defeated, although he had lost a decision to Kid Lavigne. Many of the fans, considering the Kid to be the better fighter, were disappointed at the outcome, but they were disappointed. McFarland was a skilled, scientific boxer, but so much for the clever Baltimore black. In the fifth chapter McFarland took the full count. McFarland and Gans fought twice before, losing the decision in one contest and getting a draw in the other. Gans died of consumption five years ago, while McFarland is now a fine referee in New York City.

1904—Brooklyn Tommy Sullivan defeated Abe Attell in 5 rounds at St. Louis.

PLAYER GETS DAMAGES.
 Campbell, formerly a left fielder of the New York Yankees, who was awarded a verdict of $5,000 in the case in which he was sued for breach of contract here today. The defense claimed that Campbell refused to accept service under a contract with the Yankees, but the jury held that he was entitled to payment under the contract for 1915 with the Newark club.

For Others' Greater Needs

"If Canada fails us in October we must curtail many of our activities."

—Extract from letter from Sir Arthur Stanley, Chairman, Executive Committee, British Red Cross.

Canada's answer is, that the noble work of the British Red Cross must go on, unfettered, unhampered, uncurtailed.

Canada stands fast. Its contribution on "Our Day", October 18th, will prove it.
